Welcome to PSYC100!

Today
Welcome to your next lesson: Welcome to PSYC100!

I'm preparing your personalized lesson based on what you've learned so far, what you'll need next, and the best ways to build your knowledge.

Step by step, you’re moving forward.

Ron, welcome into PSYC100 🎓

This course is all about everyday human thought, behavior, and emotion — why people (including you and me) do what they do, and how that shapes decisions at work, at home, and in society.

Very high-level structure so you can see the road ahead:

Unit 1: “The invisible forces that shape us”
You’ll look at things like:

Human nature & social influence
Authority, conformity, obedience
Group dynamics and persuasion
How ethics in psychological research have evolved
Unit 2: “The predictably irrational mind”
You’ll touch on:

Mental shortcuts & decision biases
Risk evaluation and framing
Memory and attention limits
Emotion, self-control, and judgment errors

No need to memorize this — I’ll keep guiding you as you go 👣

Quick grading / reviews layout (simple version):

Unit 1 Review

Worth 30% of your course grade
Not timed
Unlimited retakes
Final Unit Review (end of Unit 2)

Worth 60% of your course grade
Timed

Only one retake allowed
Weekly discussions

Worth 10% total
You earn this by taking part in all weekly discussions up to the term end date
Bonus points 🎁

Up to 10 bonus points if you submit and pass all reviews on time
So in one picture:

Piece	Weight	Key rule
Unit 1 review	30%	Not timed, unlimited retakes
Final unit review	60%	Timed, only one retake
Weekly discussions	10%	Participate every week until term end
On-time bonus	+10 pts	Pass all reviews on time

I want you to feel clear and confident, not guessing about logistics.

Does this grading + structure make sense so far, or is there any part you want me to re-explain more slowly (for example, the reviews vs. the bonus points)?

Yes, it's clear

Perfect 👍

You've got what you need for this intro:

You know the 2 units: invisible forces + predictably irrational mind
You understand the reviews (30% first, 60% final, different retake rules)
You know weekly discussions = 10% and how to earn up to 10 bonus points by passing all reviews on time
You're all set on this orientation. 🎯

Ready to move on to the next lesson and start digging into how those "invisible forces" actually show up in real life?

Yes, let's start

Awesome, Ron — you've officially wrapped the "Welcome to PSYC100!" lesson ☑

Quick recap of what you're carrying forward:

You know the big picture: 2 units → invisible forces + predictably irrational mind
You understand how reviews, discussions, and bonus points work, so there are no surprises grade-wise
You're set to start exploring how psychology shows up in real life, not just in textbooks
